The annual IHIE Traffic Signs Conference and Exhibition, now in its 17th year, is the foremost event for everyone involved in this specialist area and keeps you up to date with the latest developments.

With speakers from the Department for Transport, Highways Agency, Transport for London and many other leading experts, you really cannot afford to miss out!

The 2009 conference takes you to the heart of the debate on traffic sign policy

The Department launched its most comprehensive review of the British traffic sign system in over 40 years in September.

The review will ensure that traffic signs keep pace with the latest technology, help to cut congestion and emissions and keep traffic moving safely and efficiently without cluttering our streets.

- Graham Hanson, DfT, will lead a discussion allowing you to contribute to the Review's evolving proposals. Parking regulations are also one of the big issues.
- Revisions to Chapter 8 and the Red Book will be previewed.
- TfL's speed limit map offers the potential to control speed without signs: Find out more.
- LTN 1/08 is a compendium of ways of enhancing the streetscape by minimising signs.
- Sector Scheme 12D trains and qualifies traffic management designers.
- How the 2012 Olympics transport planners intend moving athletes, officials and millions of visitors to Stratford and the other venues.

Remember!

You can attend Improving Skills in Traffic Signing on 16 September at Loughborough University, before Traffic Signs 2009.

This twice yearly IHIE course aims to develop practitioners' understanding of the principles and practicalities of traffic signing. The course provides guidance on the use of the current Traffic Signs Regulations and General Directions (TSRGD), and the Traffic Signs Manual (TSM) Delegates will benefit from speakers presentations on using the TSRGD and TSM, with particular emphasis on the planning and detailed design of directional signs.

Delivered by the experts from Atkins, DfT, Buchanan Computing, Colin Buchanan.
